This Thursday my in studio guest will be none other than Olivia Barash...

Olivia Barash (born 11 January 1965 in Miami, Florida U.S.) is an American actress. She has appeared in many films, including the cult film Repo Man, as well as television series in her career, including Little House on the Prairie, Charlie's Angels, Soap, Fame, and St. Elsewhere. She also appeared in the pilot episode of The Incredible Hulk (as a little girl whom the Hulk saves from drowning in a lake). She attended Palisades High School in Pacific Palisades, California and graduated in 1982. In 1983, Barash appeared on the cover of Los Angeles disc jockey Rodney Bingenheimer's "Rodney On the Roq" volume #3 album as a uniformed, high school teen in a classroom. The album was a collection of punk rock and "new wave" songs featured on Bingenheimer's late night radio show on 106.7 KROQ-FM in Los Angeles. In 1984 she appeared as a guest on Bingenheimer's radio show to promote Repo Man. Recently[when?], Olivia Barash has been involved in the music business, as a writer and performer. In early 2008, she contributed an original song to the short film Victim as well as appearing briefly in the film. She is rumored to be attached to the upcoming feature film version, as the female lead opposite R. Michael Gull.
